What can I do?

WHAT CAN I DO TO BETTER PROTECT MYSELF, MY FAMILY, FRIENDS OR EMPLOYEES FROM BECOMING VICTIMIZED?

These are the types of questions that men and women ponder prior to attending a Refuse To Be A Victim[®] crime prevention and personal safety seminar.

Here are just a few of the things you will learn at a Refuse To Be A Victim[®] seminar:

- How to minimize risk of victimization
- How to create a personalized safety plan, before it is needed
- An array of personal safety strategies

Created by the women of the NRA in 1993, Refuse To Be A Victim[®], a four hour crime prevention seminar, presents a variety of information to help you take a pro-active role in personal safety.

From setting up a home defense plan and safe room, to using your Internet Service Provider's (ISP) parental control options to block access to adult material and adult chat rooms, the Refuse To Be A Victim[®] program has information for everyone.

take a pro-active role in personal safety

Seminar participants, young and old, are empowered by the information presented in the Refuse To Be A Victim[®] seminar. Whether you live in a major metropolitan city, the suburbs, or a one traffic-light rural town, crime prevention preparedness should be something to which you give a good deal of thought. Law enforcement and security experts agree that the best way to reduce one's chances of victimization is through the development of a personal safety strategy before it is needed.
